What can you tell me about the shopping in Cozumel?

Peggy Said:

Like Charlotte said if you are a shopper (I am not) and you are going to Cozumel to purchase big ticket items make sure you attend the class where they give you all the tips and tricks. At the very least make sure you go by the "shoppers" booth and get a copy of the carnival's guarantee policy. They will back anything you buy at their suggested stores if you should return home and it appraise lower than the price you paid.

For you non-hard-core shoppers—like me... there is still plenty to be seen and bought in Cozumel. Most of the excursions will take you at some point to the Market place in Cozumel. There are lots of touristy places to buy t-shirts and tequila and that must have Cozumel Spoon. If you are thinking more of going own-on-own then you will find a plethora of hidden treasure. All of which you can put your haggling skills to use to get for amazing prices. I so love my leather sandals and I have decided in April I will get a sun dress like my friend bought. Every time she wears it I regret not going back when she showed me hers.

So If you haven't - buy-in... cabins are filling up and I'd feel bad if I had sit on the beach with my Iguana drink at Bastas and you weren't there...

Charlotte Said:

Wow is time flying by or what, just 5 months until we sail away. For the Ladies, and the men that love them, it's a MUST to experience SHOPPING in Cozumel.

Knowing where to shop, who has the "real diamonds", who has the best buys, where "not" to shop and of course, the best places to shop, is a big concern. I have a fix for that...be sure and attend the seminar on board the ship that will give you guidance, information, answers, and material that will address all your concerns. We followed the map of stores that was given to us at the seminar and knew where to go for "free stuff", where to buy pearls by the inch, "who" to ask for at some of the shops for the best deal, and once again, what shops to avoid.

I personally LOVE to shop so I enjoyed walking and shopping. I purchased a pearl necklace and made sure I visited the shops that were giving away the freebies! We also stopped and ate at Margaritaville. The Margarita's are awesome!! We made a day of it and truly enjoyed Cozumel even though the weather wasn't the greatest.

So, get ready, get fired up and don't miss the cruise or the fun !!!! SEE YOU THERE!!!

Next Month
Charlotte and Peggy will share with you tips for the day we sail away.
